

To Whom It May Concern:

While researching different options for ending my lease early I have learned that many leasing companies permit their leases to be assumed by another individual with no liability of any type for the original lessee after the transfer is completed. As a result of the situation I presently find myself in this would be an ideal solution for getting out of my lease now and doing so in a cost effective manner.

Unfortunately, simply selling the leased vehicle to a dealership or private party would put me out thousands of dollars, and is not an option. Additionally, I do not want to violate any terms of my original lease agreement and would never sublease the vehicle to a third party. Maintaining my above average credit standing is also a concern and something that I would think would be mutually appreciated by automotive lenders.

That being said, I am writing this letter to voice my frustration regarding the inability to fully transfer my lease to another individual that would go through a credit check before taking over the lease. I understand that doing a lease transfer requires extra work on your part and for that reason I am willing to pay a reasonable fee to complete the transaction.

In the future the transferability of an automotive lease will be a significant consideration when selecting my next vehicle. I have come to learn that most well respected and well known leasing companies have adopted for a full lease transfer policy for their lessees. Just knowing that if I find myself in a similar situation down the road I will have the option to be able to transfer the lease would be reason enough to go with a leasing company with friendly transfer policies.

In closing, I encourage a review of your current lease transfer policies and procedures.

Sincerely,
